The city often sees a mix of cloudy and sunny periods, with shorter daylight hours than in summer. Light to moderate rainfall is common during this period, as October is one of Warsaw's wetter autumn months. On average, precipitation occurs on several days, but it is usually rain rather than snow, which is very rare this early in the season. Morning fog or mist can occasionally develop, especially in low-lying areas and after rainy nights. Winds are generally light to moderate, creating cool conditions that often make a jacket or coat advisable, particularly in the evenings.
